"Be Creative @ Your Library," a summer reading program in four acts, will kick off this Friday at 10 a.m. for children up to pre-K and at 3 p.m. for school-age children.

The librarians have a great program in store for Prague children this year, librarian Rebekah Husted said.

"Each week will focus on a different way to be creative: music, art, drama and photography," Husted said. "The children will have a chance to be creative themselves at the programs, and then their creativity will be on display during our 'Evening of the Arts' on Friday, June 26."

This week's program, "Act I: I Got Rhythm," will be all about music. Children at the morning program will decorate music sticks. At the afternoon program, composer Seth Cudd will talk about how music is created and written, and Ryan Tapp and will provide live music for the children.

"We are excited about giving Prague children an opportunity to express themselves at the library," Husted said. "We hope lots of children will come to the programs."
